

DISTANT LANDS NON-EXISTENT, SAYS LINDBERGH

Addresses Gathering of Japanese Government Officials

IS WARMLY APPLAUDED

Official Banquet Largely Attended; Talk is Broadcast

TOKYO, Japan, Aug. 28.—(INS).—Twentieth century aviation has made such things as "distant countries" non-existent, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh declared in a speech before a gathering of government officials and diplomats at an official banquet in the Imperial Hotel here tonight.

Warmly applauded by the distinguished group of hearers, Colonel Lindbergh sketched the progress of aviation during the last 20 years and amused the banquet guests by telling them how American children at one time marveled at how people on the other side of the world managed to walk upside down without falling off the globe.

"With the advance of radio and aircraft," he said, "the mysteries of distance can no longer exist."

The Colonel's speech was broadcast to the United States. Prior to the banquet, Lindbergh, unaccompanied by his wife, made a round of official visits, calling upon Premier Reijiro Matsuoka, among others. Later he and Mrs. Lindbergh lunched as guests of the Japanese Aviation Society and in the afternoon they attended a tea at the Tokyo Club given by United States Ambassador M. C. Forbes.

Hundreds of Japanese and Americans and virtually the entire European diplomatic corps attended.

Two Are Injured In Auto and Bus Collision

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Aug. 28.—Two persons were injured and three drivers and 22 bus passengers were shaken up in a motor accident involving three vehicles yesterday afternoon on the Lincoln Highway near here.

The injured were: Mrs. Margaret Ashbaugh, of Vandegrift, Pa., and Joseph A. Wheatley, of Baltimore. Mrs. Ashbaugh is now at St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, suffering from a laceration of the left eye and shock. Her condition is not serious. Wheatley was discharged from the institution after being treated for lacerations of the chin.

According to Patrolman Diem, of the Langhorne Highway Patrol, who investigated, the accident occurred when an East Coast Company bus, driven by Thomas Klink, of 428 South Logan avenue, Trenton, crashed into a machine driven by T. Miles Ashbaugh, of Vandegrift. The Ashbaugh car had stopped after the auto directly in front of it, driven by Steven P. Woodward, of 6168 Upland street, Philadelphia, halted to pick up a group of hitchhikers.

Driven forward by the force of the crash, Ashbaugh's car crashed into the Woodward automobile and telescoped into the machine in front of it. Mrs. Ashbaugh, the mother of the driver, was cut by the flying glass. Wheatley, a bus passenger, was injured when he struck a bus chair.

Woodward will be arrested on a charge of parking on the highway, while Klink will be arraigned on a reckless driving charge.

WEEK-END CAMPS ARE OPENED AT BUCCOU

Camp is Booked for First Two Week-Ends in September

SUMMER CAMP IS OVER

Buccou summer camp has closed but it has opened the fall period of week-end camps that have proved so popular since the construction of Good Times Hall last year. Already one troop has registered for the use of the camp site over Labor Day, and another troop has secured the second week-end in September. Going to Buccou over the week-end has become very helpful in a number of the troops as it makes it possible for the Scoutmaster to become much closer to his boys through their absolute dependence on his leadership, and the close comradeship that naturally develops. Most of the units use the Good Times Hall but during the warmer months many enjoy the Stockade, chief's den, Scout headquarters and the Cab Shack. It is the hope of the county administration that very soon there will be available an enclosed troop unit for sixteen Scouts, and one leader which will be especially desirable for winter camping, and particularly useful during rainy summer camping.

The 1931 camping season closed last Saturday in a most happy way. The success of the annual camp show on Thursday evening that drew over 600 people from the country surrounding camp, and Bucks County gave the last week a decided impetus that makes "last weeks at Buccou" very popular. Max Koplin, chairman of the Newportville troop committee, as master of ceremonies was a "riot," and made everybody feel at home. Former Scoutmaster Robert C. Belleville, of Yardley, led in community singing which proved to be a change from previous programs. Chairman of the camping and health committee of the County Council Executive Board, Arthur M. Eastburn, gave a cordial welcome to everybody, and expressed the pleasure of the board that so many were present. The show was full of good humor, and the success of it's production was due to the leadership of Eagle Scout James Townsend, of Langhorne, who is program director at camp.

The camp staff completed the putting away of equipment on Tuesday afternoon, and then journeyed to Quakertown to assist Assistant Executive W. Fred Hauser in arranging the Scout exhibit at the Bucks County Fair.

The members of the council executive board met at Buccou last Tuesday for their summer meeting. The camp budget and administration were discussed with a special camp tour supplementing the report. L. M. Hamlet, of Pierce & Hedrick, was present, and discussed the financial condition of the council with members of the board. During the executive board meeting the wives of the members enjoyed an afternoon of bridge with Mrs. Thomas B. Stockham, followed by a buffet luncheon. Board members and their wives who were present included: President and Mrs. Thomas B. Stockham, Mr. and Mrs. William Burgess, of Morrisville; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Clymer and daughters, Misses Rose and Emily, of Doylestown; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Eastburn, of Doylestown; Mr. and Mrs. Minot J. Hill, of Bristol; Hon. Hiram H. Keller, of Doylestown; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Lovett, of Yardley; Henry Palmer, of Langhorne; Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Strathie, of Newtown; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Treffinger, of Quakertown; Mrs. Robert X. Perry, of Bristol; and Mrs. Stoneback of Quakertown.

WASHINGTON PICTURES TO BE PUT IN SCHOOLS

Schools of 9th Congressional District Supplied Upon Request

THROUGH REP. WATSON

Announcement was made today by Representative Henry W. Watson of the Ninth Congressional District, that each school room of the schools in his district will be provided, upon request, with a beautiful portrait-poster of George Washington, executed in colors.

The portrait to be used in these posters is a reproduction of the famous Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum painting, and will be 22 by 28 inches. This poster was selected after a good deal of study, and is considered the finest example of poster making available.

The poster-pictures featuring George Washington are being distributed by Representative Watson in co-operation with the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission of Washington, D. C., in order to stimulate interest among the thousands of school children of the district in the coming nine-months of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of the Father of Our Country.

Representative Watson is in constant touch with the activities of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission which was created by Congress to formulate and execute plans for the great celebration in 1932.

The United States Commission is placing a good deal of emphasis on the cooperation of the school children of America in this historic event. This poster-picture is just one feature of its work.

Representative Watson announced that he will endeavor to supply schools, clubs, churches, fraternal and patriotic organizations in his district with literature that may be issued by the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, and also wishes to call the attention of the citizens of his district that many patriotic and important events during the Revolutionary War occurred within Bucks and Montgomery counties.

The George Washington Bicentennial Celebration will begin on February 22, 1932, and last until the following Thanksgiving Day.

Hold Two Men On Charge of Assault

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 28.—A brief hearing yesterday before Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack on a charge of highway robbery and aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill, Clifford Ashton, of New Hope, and Charles Edwards, of Bedford county, were committed to the county prison to await the first session of criminal court when they will enter pleas of guilty.

County Detective Anthony Russo appeared at the hearing as the only witness. He produced signed confessions given to him and to State Police by Ashton and Edwards, both of whom were arrested at Greensburg ten days ago after beating up and robbing James Hansell, of Mechanicsville, of over $1000.

Hansell was not at the hearing but it was reported that his condition is considerably improved after a beating administered to him by Edwards and Ashton that required seventy-two stitches to sew up the wounds.

THE BELITTLERS

Gordon Selridge, American owner of a large London department store and the man who introduced the department store idea to Europe, was talking about the five most beautiful things. He put a beautiful woman first. The rest really do not matter. But he was speaking to a class in architecture, so he closed his list with "a beautiful edifice."

Doing what was expected of him, he enunciated the familiar wheeze about American buildings being high and massive but without beauty. Why it is so much better to have low and ugly buildings, as in Europe, rather than high and ugly, as in America, is a question no one has troubled to answer. But Americans have become a bit weary of having their skyscrapers indiscriminately condemned as unbeautiful. Some of them are, of course. But there are towering office and hotel buildings in the United States of architectural loveliness on a par with anything of which Europe can boast in the way of commercial structures.

It is getting to be something of a bore to put up with Europe's airs of superiority architecturally. There seems to be a lot of sour grapes in all this belittling. Why do not both sides confess that their buildings are peculiarly adapted to their own needs and that the European type of building would be as much out of place in New York as the Woolworth Building in London?

DESERT TO DESERT

Tombstone, once the largest town in Arizona, is dying a slow death. Flooded silver mines robbed her of the bulk of her population and now the march of progress passing her by, has lost to her the prestige of being the seat of Cochise County. The die is cast. Tombstone is fated to be one of those ghost towns that have given their all and having yielded their natural resources found no reason for their own existence. Such is the tragic fate of mining towns, scenes of oil and gas booms, lumber centers and other cities and towns that depend for their very existence on exhaustible stores of natural wealth.

Many will mourn the passing of Tombstone, the most famous mining camp of the old southwest and the worst hole of humanity as long as it clung to the distinction of being the largest town in Arizona. It got its picturesque, though hardly inviting, name from the old prospector who found "pay dirt" in the rocky dragons where he had been told he would find only his tombstone.

Forlorn Tombstone would have lost the seat of the county government years ago but for rivalry between Douglas and Bisbee, both of which claimed title to it. So the little life that has been hers these last several years was more or less artificial and undeserved. But even as a "deserted village" Tombstone, for no other reason than its name, will continue to attract romantic tourists, for there is something in a name.

To some people the Federal Treasury is Santa Claus and every day Christmas.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT BY CONY, FRIENDS, INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

On Christmas Eve young and pretty Geraldine Foster disappeared from the office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, where she was employed. Mrs. Morgan, Maskell's neighbor, corroborates his statement that he distributed gifts with her daughter that afternoon. Geraldine had broken her engagement with Harry Armstrong. It is also learned that the mysterious Ephraim Foster, who had written Geraldine, is a woman. A black mail note, presumably written by the missing girl, leads Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt to a deserted house on Peddler's Road. Outside a window, he finds seven dead, blood-stained pigeons. The interior of the house is topsyturvy. Colt comes upon a bloody axe and a strand of blond hair. Betty Canfield, Geraldine's roommate, identifies the body of a nude woman found buried a short distance away as that of the missing girl. A pillow case covers the head. Although the surrounding ground is dry, the grave contains a pine-scented fluid. The medical examiner states she was dead not more than 36 hours. Two bottles, similar to those recently carried away from the doctor's office by two women the day of the disappearance, are found near the grave. Colt learns that Geraldine's inheritance from her father will now go to her brother, Bruce. A key found in the dead girl's apartment fits the Peddler's Road house. Questioned, Bruce admits he suspected Armstrong.

CHAPTER XVIII.

BEFORE Thatcher Colt could proceed, a rap came at the door and Captain Henry came in, carrying a small envelope which he laid very carefully on the desk.

"From Doctor Multooler," he said. "You asked for them, he says. From the dead girl's mouth."

Bruce Foster averted his gaze as Thatcher Colt gingerly opened the envelope. He peered inside, and I was close enough also to see that the envelope contained some minute particles of some dried, red, sticky substance.

"Take these to Cledeek," ordered the Commissioner. "Tell him I want the brand established at the earliest possible moment."

Captain Henry saluted and retired, carrying the envelope far from him at the tips of his pudgy fingers. While I was wondering at this strange incident, Thatcher Colt turned back to Bruce Foster.

One by One.

"Maybe you are not telling me everything?" he asked, with a melancholy glance. "Anyway, you will, sooner or later. Now, Bruce, I want you to get your mother and father and take them home. Give them something to make them sleep tonight. But I want you back here tomorrow morning."

Bruce promised and left the room, considerably chastened. Thatcher Colt's eyes, now turned to mine, held a cryptic expression.

"Tony," he said, shaking his head, as if by that motion to throw from his soul the shadow of an evil influence, "let's forget that boy just now. I am sometimes a telepathist. I now hereby read your mind and know that you wish I would talk to Betty Canfield next and get through with her so that the young lady can go home."

"Right," I exclaimed, and bounded for the door. My heart smote me at the sight of the woe-begone little figure that I saw slumped in the chair. But the brisk way she stood up and the sad smile of friendship she gave me quickened my admiration.

Thatcher Colt received her with a pleasant wave of his hand.

"Betty," he began, "I am coming right to the point with you. You have not been frank with me from the start, child, but now you must realize that you have to be. Why did you and Geraldine quarrel the day before she disappeared?"

Her shocked expression betrayed how greatly taken by surprise she was. But Thatcher Colt gave her no time.

"No evasions. What was it about?"

"Mr. Colt, I don't want to tell you."

"This is murder!"

Moral Turpitude.

"Even so, I can't tell you."

"Then let me tell you," said Thatcher Colt. "One of your neighbors overheard you and told one of my men. It was about Bruce Foster and his suspicions of his sister's morals, was it not?"

Betty would not speak. Even though she was disobeying my chief, I had to admire her loyalty to her dead friend, and so, I think, did Thatcher Colt.

"Bruce thought Geraldine had an affair with Harry Armstrong—and that he had thrown her over and refused to marry her. He first came to you about it. You told Geraldine—and that started the quarrel."

Thankfully Betty Canfield looked up at the Commissioner.

"Now, Betty, can you tell me Geraldine was innocent?"

"Absolutely."

"But the engagement was broken?"

"Yes—they kept meeting, trying to patch up whatever it was they quarreled about."

"Do you know what it was?"

"No."

"All right. We'll pass all that. Have you a lease on your apartment on Morningdale Heights?"

"Yes."

"How long does it run?"

"Until next May."

"Then you intend to sublet it?"

"Yes, I have been trying for the last two months."

"Who exhibits the apartment when you are at work?"

"The janitor, or one of the elevator boys."

Dropping this, Thatcher Colt asked:

"When was the last time Harry Armstrong telephoned your apartment?"

"Harry telephoned twice about three o'clock on Saturday morning," she answered.

"You mean the early morning hours of Christmas Eve?"

"Yes."

"But how is that possible? Where did he telephone from? He was supposed to be on the night train to Boston."

"That's odd. You know I hadn't thought of that before, Mr. Colt."

Thatcher Colt lit his pipe, which had gone out. Dismissing the former line of questions, he resumed:

"Now tell me the real reason why you meet Doctor Maskell with the frappe glance and the glance manner? You fibbed to me the last time you were down here. You said you didn't like him, but didn't know why. But I doubted that yarn, Betty. What makes you dislike the doctor?"

She stood up and held out her hand.

"If I tell you, will you let me go home?"

"Promise!"

"Because Doctor Maskell often told Geraldine that he believed murder justified under certain circumstances. By the way she repeated it, I think he meant it, and since I heard that I could never bear the sight of him."

"Indeed!" said Thatcher Colt, softly.

With one backward glance at me, Betty left the office. Thatcher Colt remained moodily at his desk, toying with the blue ribbon of the key.

"Our motives accumulate, Tony," he remarked.

"Are there any that I hadn't noticed?"

"Plenty of them. Now let's have a look at Harry Armstrong. The fiancé of the murdered Geraldine was a young man of medium height, with greenish-blue eyes, curly brown hair, and a slightly supercilious air. It was quite evident that he resented being called to Police Headquarters. But in spite of the rather top-lofty attitude that Armstrong assumed, it was easy to see and appraise the tragic, wounded expression that glowed in his handsome eyes.

As always, Thatcher Colt began by trying to win his confidence. In a murder mystery such as this, the Commissioner explained, the police placed their chief reliance on the frankness of the friends of the slain person. He hoped he might count on Mr. Armstrong to answer all questions freely.

"You may," said the young man, laconically but with sharp emphasis.

"Your parents live in Boston?"

"My mother lives there."

"Father dead?"

"Yes."

"All right," he said. "Now, tell me about yourself."

Armstrong was a bond salesman with Fisher and Clark, a large securities firm in the Wall Street district. He had first met Geraldine Foster two years before at a dance. Their friendship ripened until they finally became engaged. They had made their plans to be married on the day after New Year's.

"Had you made any preparations for your new living quarters?" asked Thatcher Colt.

"Of course. Ever since I have been in New York, I have lived in two old-fashioned rooms in a house on East Sixty-ninth Street. Geraldine and I had decided to go right on living there."

Thatcher Colt fixed his sombre dark eyes directly on the young man.

"Were there intimate, premarital arrangements between you and Geraldine Foster?" he asked.

A Sensitive Subject.

"Bruce Foster has been talking to you?" cried Armstrong angrily.

With great deliberation, Thatcher Colt emptied his pipe, and slowly re-filled it before speaking again.

"You know, Armstrong, he said, 'I am glad to find such old-fashioned, conscientious about such matters. Lots of people today consider trial marriage and things like that wholly respectable. But apparently that isn't true of Bruce Foster, old Mr. Foster, or yourself.'"

"Or Geraldine!" exclaimed Armstrong simply and vigorously.

"Suppose she has been intimate with another man?" said Thatcher Colt suddenly. A deep pallor crossed the young face, and beads of milky perspiration stood on his brow.

"I won't discuss that," he said huskily.

By CALVIN FADER

ONE without number during his most active farm days, Washington entered this door for evening talks with his wise and good friend, George Mason, the sage of Gunston Hall. Within this rural retreat, reached by a short run toward the Potomac River from Pohick Church, colonial problems were discussed as neighbor to neighbor. Here the "non-importation resolutions" were prepared by Mason for introduction by Washington in the House of Burgesses.

BOXWOOD HOUSE AT GUNSTON HALL

ONE may easily picture Washington as a quiet and observant figure at Sunday gatherings around Pohick where he served as a vestryman. The roadside church of his time was the radio of our day, and Colonial and community events were broadcast in neighborly greetings at the close of services. Pohick is located on U. S. 1, eighteen miles below Washington.

"TOMMY" STAGG PLANS TO TRAIN IN BRISTOL

"Tommy" Stagg, well-known in the fighting game, who at present is employed at the Keystone Aircraft Corporation plant, is at present training for a ring come-back. During his employment in Bristol, "Tommy" expects to reside in Bristol, and he states: "I think the climate and surroundings while in training would just suit me, just to get away from the city of Philadelphia."

In a recent issue of a metropolitan paper a sports writer had this to say about Stagg:

"Looks like tough times ahead for Benny Leonard—or for the fans. I don't know which. Here's one from Tommy Stagg, who fought a lot of the brave laddies Mr. Leonard fought when Mr. Leonard was around as champ. Tommy works at the Keystone Aircraft Corp., in Bristol, and devotes his spare time to art. He's just finished a still life for the Biltmore Hotel in Atlantic City and that isn't enough. Just because Leonard is coming back he wants to. Next thing Kid Einstein will be challenging K. O. Edison. Oh, well, maybe Mr. Stagg, the artist, would be a better opponent for Mr. Leonard, the business man, than some of these rough persons Mr. Leonard may meet."

DO-X Giant Seaplane Lubricated With Mobiloil

News of the landing of the great German seaplane, DO-X, in New York Harbor yesterday was received with a great deal of interest in Bristol by Nicholas Listorti, operator of the local Rusk-Lehigh Oil Corporation's service stations, distributors of Vacuum products. Word was received by him that the DO-X, largest flying boat in the world, has been lubricated since its first trial flight with Mobiloil and powered by gasoline furnished by the makers of Mobilgas.

Upon its arrival in New York Harbor, the great ship was greeted by the city officials, officers of the Vacuum Oil Co., and scientists interested in the records of the ship's remarkable flight.

The officers and crew of the DO-X were each presented with the Mobiloil Valor Medal by the officers of the Vacuum Oil Co. in recognition of their contribution to aviation.

The Rusk-Lehigh Oil Corporation feels gratified over the record of this great ship which was made with the products of the Vacuum Oil Company.

PROBABLY the most flabbergasted chap ever sold "down de ribber" of organized baseball was Arthur "Dizzy" Dean, one-time St. Louis Card rookie southpaw, who is vying with Ol' Sol himself in burning up Texas League diamonds this season. The "Dizzy" individual came to the Cards 'the middle of last season and in his debut blanked Pittsburgh, not to Dean's surprise but to that of everyone else. In a few other starts he looked good but green. Great was his chagrin when he was not used in the World's Series. "Dizzy" would have the muses of history record that Dean's confinement to bench and bull pen accounted for that Athletic triumph. "Dizzy" was so hot over his World Series exclusion that some thought he would spend the Winter up near the North Pole, but he finally managed to cool off much farther south, and then—

The St. Louis management ups and farms him out way down the river to Houston. Did that make Dean dizzier? Well, he joined the cactus kickers as soon as the training table echoed with its opening dinner bell last Spring and he's been pitching with real brilliance ever since.

The Cards have a string (or is it a rope or chain?) on Dean and he may be recalled before this season ends. At any event, he's slated to leave the bushes for the big show next Spring and—will his sinistral slants make opposing sluggers dizzy? Ask Dean. He's ready with an answer.

The game's other widely exploited squirrel dodger—none other than Arthur (once) the Great Shires, is thrilling with the Milwaukee Brewers, how fitting! Shires, who was on his way to battling Primo Carnera as a sideline when with the Chicago White Sox, has decided—like Tunney and Dempsey—to quit the ring. Since being aired by Washington after the Sox sacked him, he's been concentrating on baseball and there's nothing near-beerish to his record with the Brewers. Shires should be back in the big show next year at the latest. Milwaukee is a St. Louis Brown farm but he is likely to be sent to the Chicago Cubs or the Philadelphia Athletics depending on which club will trade the most desirable players or pay the best price for him. Yes, Shires may become a great, if not THE great, player he believes himself to be.
